Are Your Employees Afraid to Return to Work?

The number of Americans getting vaccinated is growing. But what if your business has employees working from home who still fear health problems related to a return to your workplace? In spite of the precautions that we've come to think of as routine — masks, social distancing, hand sanitizer and vaccinations — some workers may drag their feet when it comes to setting a return-to-the-workplace date. What can you do short of threatening termination?

Know Your Legal Obligations Under the Americans with Disabilities Act

It's not unusual for employers to learn the hard way about what is and isn't permissible when it comes to handling employees with disabilities. For many, learning comes when they are sued by the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission. But it doesn't have to be that way. Important lessons can be learned by monitoring recent cases brought by the agency. Take a look at the latest.
